Subject: feasibility study for banning peanuts in city owned facilities

Hello Aidan - just a quick word about this issue for your consideration

I think the money and time for a feasibility study would be better spent supplying these facilities with epi-pens and staff training in their use.

It is not feasible to enforce such a ban, leaving those with a peanut allergy with a false sense of security.

Not to mention all the other individuals who have life threatening allergies to other foods or bee stings. Are their concerns any less valid?
