

LRT PRESENTATION TO HAMILTON CITY COUNCIL

March 28/17

K. Watson

I offer an alternate to the Metrolinx report before you. Mine is done by myself. It attempts to offer a humanistic balance to the impersonality of the many-page report from Metrolinx. It tries to place before you the problems of those who put you in those chairs.

On the list are names of 560 businesses along the proposed LRT route. Each occupies a single line whether they be a Convenience Store, a hotel or Stelco Tower. The number of employees who work along that route is over a thousand.

Between these businesses are 259 buildings where people live. In my list a single family, single floor house gets a single line, as does the multi-floor multiplex containing dozens, even hundreds of apartments.

Even more live above the businesses. Sometimes there is only a single floor of apartments, in other cases there are multiple floors.

Collectively, business people and residents probably number more than ten thousand people who will have to deal with LRT construction at their front door.

One professional I spoke to received a letter from Metrolinx telling her to send any bills related to lost business etc. directly to Metrolinx rather than file a suit. Would you hear about her and others like her's inability to get to work, or park her car if she did? Would you be blind-sided by such lack of information? She said not everyone got her encouraging invitation. Does that surprise you?

In my list are none of the addresses of the residents of neighbouring streets whose quiet and safe places will be turned into high traffic areas - the others who will be required to arrange for safe transit to and from school. The others with longer commutes. Those whose disability will make accessing care and service they need even more of a burden. Would this include tens of thousands more?

The people who deliver, rescue, and safe-guard will be hindered from their appointed duties. Workers needing to pass even close to the proposed LRT route will face traffic tangles that Metrolinx tells you are not imaginable. How many thousands more should be added to the list of the impacted – the time tax they must then pay every day? These voters, all those thousands, need your responsible action?

If Hamilton were suddenly asked to take in thousands of economic migrants displaced from their homes and livelihoods, it would strain all our resources. This is what Metrolinx, with your help, will deliver to our city. It will divert a fortune from the city to accounts elsewhere, create a frustrated and cynical electorate and leave a gutted transit system limping to meet the needs of most of the city.

Fortunately everyone including Metrolinx knows there is a way out of the destructive scenario. Wrecked streets, displaced homeowners, bankrupted businesses, blank cheques issued on the on the City's Future Accounts - It is all unnecessary.

For the same cost, a fleet of about 600 electric, battery-powered busses of different sizes tailored to service need, and their charging facilities, could be purchased any time you want. Now! I was told by manufacturers that Staff already know details of this option.

This fleet could phase into the traffic stream, at least 10 buses on each of Hamilton's 50 or so routes throughout the municipality with no displacement or damage.

Such additions would provide close to the 5-minute service target that could get people, all over the city, out of cars because it would reduce transfer times to a few minutes. You achieve carbon footprint targets on schedule.

Such a fleet could charge on off-peak electricity at lower cost.

These buses could be autonomous, share the road with other vehicles, and need none of the destructive roadwork demanded by Metrolinx.

Such a fleet would not demand the compression of years of scheduled future maintenance of underground services into as many months so that Metrolinx could install its steel stake through the city's heart. If you had trouble balancing this year's budget, wait to see the future demands an LRT will bring to council.

Please send this report for the further study it requires and while that is going on, maybe you could contact Canadian Urban Transit Research and Innovation Consortium about joining the studies of electric buses planned for neighbouring municipalities.

SUMMARY OF DATA COLLECTED ON THE NUMBER OF BUILDINGS
ALONG PROPOSED LRT ROUTE

March 2017

K. Watson (905) 575-8044

- 1) I attempted to count all building doorways to separate establishments along the proposed LRT route because the information collected by Metrolinx is not made available despite it being collected by Hamilton City Hall Staff.
- 2) Each line represents a particular residence (R) or Business (B) but for completeness I've also noted Parking Lots, Church property (C), Schools and Parks or Green Space. I've adopted a code for brevity. A notation like 'R u R would mean that a residence is on street level and another upstairs above it. A '?' under the street address column indicates that I could not find the number on the building but there was a building nevertheless.
- 3) There is no way for me to distinguish between the size of multiplex units so a single building of a dozen or more gets the same single line as a single floor bungalow. To adjust this imbalance requires making some assumptions. The same for Businesses. Stelco Tower gets one line like every Business run by a single owner. Again assumptions need to be made if one is to appreciate the size of impact of the building of an LRT.
- 4) The number of residence counts does not include those which are on an upper level over stores. So the number of real residences is much larger than the number of lines with an 'R'. Another disagreement might be over whether a retirement home is a business or a residence. I called it a residence.
- 5) The number of retirement residences along the route ought to be of concern because of the constraints construction will place on residents being able to get out to appointments so necessary to their continued well being. Taxis and Darts must frequently make delayed stops to discharge and load passengers while traffic is snarled behind them because of constricted roadways. The same applies to any of the 259 buildings along the construction route who have residents who are either infirm or need assistance during the lengthy period of construction and the limited traffic flow that will follow.
- 6) Business changes may mean that some vacant buildings have been occupied, or occupied ones emptied but this is felt to be less than 1%.
- 7) There seems a surprising number of business vacancies all along the route already - 82 compared to 560 businesses in operation. The businesses listed likely employ more than two thousand workers. All of these workers can expect to bear the burden of increased time to get to and from work.
- 8) The effect of building an LRT will be to increase the number of business failures if the model of other communities is followed. How does Council expect those business owners to react?

- 9) Will business owners, whose business are along the proposed LRT route, be given tax exemptions to compensate for their loss of income during building?
- 10) The number of residences in the list is 259 but it does not include those residences that are second floor apartments over stores along the route. This will raise the total number of homes affected. When the adjustment for number of apartments in the multiplexes is added, a total number of families along the route dealing with the construction at their doorstep could exceed 1000 and the number of people in those families approach many thousands more.
- 11) This tally does not include effects on adjacent streets made hazardous or noisier by displaced traffic. The number of strongly affected citizens, affected to the point of demanding major adjustments to work schedules, is a reality Council must address. It is not a stretch to estimate such an impact on tens of thousands of Hamiltonians and the tally has yet to include those trying to drive about the city, to work, to make deliveries, to respond to emergencies – all because Metrolinx wants you to let them drive a steel stake through the heart of this city – as though there were not other options that could be in place for the whole community in the time a rail system would run part way through downtown.
- 12) On whom will the time and transit burden fall most heavily? Not Council or Metrolinx who live elsewhere and don't take transit to work!
- 13) If Hamilton were asked to suddenly take in thousands of economically displaced immigrants, it would strain all our resources. This is what Metrolinx, with your help, is intending to bring to Hamilton. They will divert a fortune from the city to its accounts elsewhere leaving a gutted transit system less able to meet the transit needs of most of the city.

It is all unnecessary.

For the same cost, a fleet of about 600 electric busses of different sizes tailored to service need, and their charging facilities could put at least 10 buses on each of Hamilton's 50 or so routes throughout the municipality and approach the 5 minute service target that could get people out of cars because it would reduce transfer times to a few minutes. Such a fleet would charge on off-peak electricity at lower cost. These buses could be autonomous, share the road with other vehicles, and need none of the destructive roadwork demanded by Metrolinx. Such a fleet would not demand the compression of decades of scheduled maintenance of underground services required by Metrolinx, into a couple years, a financial burden the City could not bear.

When the data sheets were reviewed, discrepancies in the index numbers were found, wrongly assigned number on page 2, dropped numbers on page 8, repeated numbers on page 13 and 20. Adjustments were made on the tally so that, to the best of my ability, the numbers on the count by page are accurate.
